If you face challenges to becoming a homeowner...

Now there's help at www.kchomeprograms.com

You'd like to buy a home, but you may have little or no money for a mortgage down payment. You may have less-than-perfect credit. Or you may have little money for closing costs and other up-front fees

If this sounds like your family, and you feel you face an unmet need for good quality housing that's within your means, go to www.kchomeprograms.com to learn about programs designed to help.

The housing industry has made good strides toward removing barriers to housing opportunities for working families like yours. Innovative financing programs have been developed and are widely available throughout Kansas City and the surrounding area.

Until now, finding these programs has been difficult. You haven't had a comprehensive resource of information to help learn about the very programs developed to serve your family!

That's why the Kansas City Regional Association of REALTORS[®], working with Fannie Mae, lenders, and other not-for-profit organizations throughout Greater Kansas City, has developed a central information website: www.kchomeprograms.com.

Visit www.kchomeprograms.com to learn about mortgage and downpayment assistance programs specifically for your needs.

Search using your income, household size and location criteria. Find programs for no- and low-down payment mortgages, low interest rate plans, grants, forgivable loans, and others that may be just what your family needs today.

Opportunities for homeownership are out there.

And now they're easier to find.
